

Things to Consider When Selecting a Share Plan

Share Plans are great alternative healthcare options for individuals, families and employees. Being unique offerings, there are some things to consider when selecting a Share Plan.

Your Share Plan may:

- Have a pre-existing condition clause
- Require a health coach for certain, unresolved medical conditions at an additional cost
 - Example: smoking cessation, weight loss and uncontrolled blood sugar levels
- Decline your application in underwriting
- Not include Mental Health
- Have limited Prescription benefit (ie., cover acute care only)

Many of these considerations might be resolved by EverMed DPC's services or by layering complementary plan options. For some, these considerations might mean the Share Plan is not the right option for your personal situation.

Review these conditions with your healthcare broker. They will help you , your family or your employees navigate all of your options and weigh the benefits and gaps to find the right fit for you.
